

Editorial

Åsa Gunnarsson¹

Umeå University, Umeå, Sweden

Monica Burman²

Umeå University, Umeå, Sweden

We are pleased to publish an interesting collection of articles that exploits an open question on justice both regarding methods of work and substantial content. The guest editor is a professor in legal philosophy, Eva-Maria Svensson from the University of Gothenburg. She arranged an opportunity for a group of scholars to innovatively apply justice on their academic fields of interest. Svensson explains how the task originally was tackled and how justice was approached by the participants. From the open address the concept of justice trickled down to studies on various perspectives of inequalities that connects to transformative processes in the Nordic welfare state model. Justice is also at the heart of all legal professions and processes. At present, when society is undergoing a huge crisis, the articles reminds us that justice constantly needs to be a part of a vivid, enlightened, diverse and engaged discussion on the relation between law and society.

¹ Co-Editor in Chief. Address: Åsa Gunnarsson, Umeå University, S-901 87 Umeå, Sweden. Email: asa.gunnarsson@umu.se

² Co-Editor in Chief. Address: Monica Burman, Umeå University, S-901 87 Umeå, Sweden. Email: monica.burman@umu.se

